	Purpose: To compare the effects of different resistance training (RT) volumes on muscle performance and hypertrophy in trained men. Methods: The study included 37 volunteers that performed RT for 24 weeks and were divided into groups that performed five (G5), 10 (G10), 15 (G15) and 20 (G20) sets per muscle group per week. Ten repetition maximum (10RM) tests were performed for the bench press, lat pull down, 45° leg press, and stiff legged deadlift. Muscle thickness (MT) was measured using ultrasound at biceps brachii, triceps brachii, pectoralis major, quadriceps femoris and gluteus maximus. All measurements were performed at the beginning (pre) and after 12 (mid) and 24 weeks (post) of training. Results: All groups showed significant increases in all 10RM tests and MT measures after 12 and 24 weeks of TR ( $p < 0.05$ ). There were no differences in any 10RM test between G5 and G10 ( $p > 0.05$ ) after 12 and 24 weeks. G5 and G10 showed significantly greater increases of 10RM than G15 and G20 for bench press, lat pulldown, leg press and stiff legged deadlift, both at 12 and 24 weeks. There were no group by time interaction for any MT measure. Conclusions: Five to 10 sets per week might be sufficient for bringing about optimal gains in muscle size and strength in trained men over a 24-week period. There appears to be a deleterious effect for higher volumes ( $\geq 15$ sets per week), especially after 12 weeks of training. These results bring evidence of an inverted "U shaped" curve for the dose response curve for muscle strength, with a possible deleterious effect after exceeding a certain training volume. Whilst the same trend was noted for muscle hypertrophy, the results did not reach significance. Therefore, using low volume RT programs might be an interesting alternative for personal trainers, strength coaches and medical practitioners to increase muscle size and strength in trained men.	Purpose: To compare the effects of different resistance training (RT) volumes on muscle performance and hypertrophy in trained men. Methods: The study included 37 volunteers that performed RT for 24 weeks and were divided into groups that performed five (G5), 10 (G10), 15 (G15) and 20 (G20) sets per muscle group per week. 213	Board #51 Effects Of An 8-week Mixed-methods Strength Training On Maximal Strength Of Weightlifting Athletes. Gianpiero Greco, Francesco Camporeale, Francesco Fischetti. University of Study of Bari, Bari, Italy. Email: gianpigreco@hotmail.it (No relevant relationships reported)	May 29 11:00 AM - 12:30 PM		PURPOSE: The purpose of this study was to investigate the duration of temporary increasing in muscle thickness and upper arm circumference induced by resistance exercise in the triceps brachii for resistance-trained and untrained subjects. METHODS: Four kinds of resistance exercises were performed on 28 healthy adult males ( $26 \pm 3$ yrs), resistance-trained ( $n = 14$ ) and untrained ( $n = 14$ ). The extracellular water content, muscle thickness, upper arm circumference, oxygenated hemoglobin (oxy-Hb) were examined before exercise, within 5-minute, 30-minute, and 60-minute after exercise. Two-way analysis of variance was used to confirm acute effects. RESULTS: The extracellular water content of upper arm (+0.22 L), triceps brachii muscle thickness (+3 mm), upper arm circumference (+2 cm) increased only in the resistance-trained subjects 5-minute after exercise compared with before exercise. However, there was no difference between before exercise and 30-minute after exercise values. The oxy-Hb increased immediately after exercise in both resistance-trained (+42 %) and untrained subjects (+39 %), but no significant difference was observed between resistance-trained and untrained subjects. CONCLUSION: Temporary increasing in muscle thickness and upper arm circumference within 5 minute after resistance exercise was a response occurred only in the resistance-trained subjects, and it was confirmed that the response disappeared within 30-minute. 	Purpose: To examine the effects of ST on physical performance after a 12-week training period in adolescent female soccer players. Methods: 37 adolescent female soccer players from Spanish soccer team (age: $16.1 \pm 1.1$ years; height: $159.7 \pm 7.1$ cm; body mass: $55 \pm 7.1$ kg) were randomly assigned to an experimental (EG; $n = 19$ ) or a control group (CG; $n = 18$ ). All players underwent a regular soccer training 3 times per week. Participants in the EG received ST program (12 weeks, 2 times per week, 20 min per session). The ST program included lower limb strength and core muscle. The players were tested at the beginning and the end of the intervention on bilateral countermovement jump (CMJ) test, unilateral CMJ test, 40m sprint, $180^\circ$ COD and V-cut test. Paired t-test was conducted to detect significant differences between the pre and post-tests in both groups. Statistical significant was inferred from $p < 0.05$ . RESULTS: EG made significantly greater improvement than CG did on CMJ (GE pre $23.5 \pm 3.30$ cm vs post $25.6 \pm 3.65$ cm, $p < 0.01$ ; GC pre $23 \pm 3.73$ cm vs post $23.9 \pm 4.35$ cm), right CMJ (GE pre $12.9 \pm 1.95$ cm vs post $14.3 \pm 2.44$ cm, $p < 0.05$ ; GC pre $12.1 \pm 2.77$ cm vs post $13.1 \pm 2.65$ cm), 40m sprint (GE pre $6.51 \pm 0.26$ s vs post $6.24 \pm 0.25$ s, $p < 0.01$ ; GC pre $6.24 \pm 0.21$ s vs post $6.29 \pm 0.25$ s), left $180^\circ$ COD (GE pre $2.96 \pm 0.16$ s vs post $2.89 \pm 0.18$ s, $p < 0.05$ ; GC pre $2.93 \pm 0.15$ s vs post $2.91 \pm 0.11$ s) and V-cut (GE pre $8.05 \pm 0.38$ s vs post $7.81 \pm 0.27$ s, $p < 0.01$ ; GC pre $7.98 \pm 0.38$ s vs post $7.97 \pm 0.39$ s). Conclusions: Twelve weeks ST could improve bilateral and unilateral muscular power, speed and	May 29 11:00 AM - 12:30 PM
